Climate (Im-)Mobility:

FFVT International Summer School on Forced Migration and Governance
Call for applications

What is the relation between climate change and various forms of migration? How does environmental change drive human movement? What are current trends, challenges and patterns regarding this topic? What are the disparities and resemblances at different political levels? What strategies are being employed to address climate-induced mobility? And what about immobilities? When and how do they manifest, and can proactive measures be implemented to prevent them? How can we strive towards achieving environmental justice in the context of climate-induced mobility? And what lessons can be drawn, both from scientific perspectives and practical experiences, to inform future policies and actions?

Do these questions pique your curiosity? Explore these intriguing queries and delve into the myriad of others as we embark on a journey to unravel the complexities of Climate (Im-)Mobility at our FFVT Summer School 2024. The international, interdisciplinary Summer School is hosted by the Centre for Human Rights Erlangen-Nuremberg (CHREN) as part of the project "Forced Migration and Refugee Studies: Networking and Knowledge Transfer" (FFVT) and takes place in Nuremberg, Germany, from 15 to 20 July 2024.

The Summer School deals with the topic of climate change and climate (im-)mobility in depth, providing insights into a plethora of topics:

- the relation between climate change and mobility,
- trends, challenges and patterns concerning climate-induced migration (in different regional contexts),
- different climate mobility regimes,
- global, regional, national and local governance and administrative practices,
- human rights in the field of climate-induced migration,
- climate/environmental and mobility justice,
- multiple actors' perspectives, including experiences made by people on the move themselves, as well as
- crosscutting issues and research ethics.

The FFVT Summer School places emphasis on interactive learning approaches. In addition to lectures, scholars will provide interactive workshops in order to discuss and reflect on central subjects with the participants. Such input is complemented by a cultural program, an excursion in Nuremberg, the 'City of Peace and Human Rights', and a gathering with practitioners working in the field to promote further debate. Finally, the FFVT Summer School also offers time and space for participants to present their own projects as well as enter into discussion with others and thus network.

Application Modalities:

Advanced Master students, early-stage PhD candidates as well as junior practitioners working in this field can apply for participation in the FFVT Summer School. In order to apply for participation, please send us the following information:

- Letter of motivation specifying your interest for taking part in the FFVT Summer School. You are welcome to briefly describe the projects you are currently working on.
- Up-to-date CV

As the number of participants is limited to 30, the selection committee will review all applications and select participants based on the information provided. Kindly note that you may need to submit further documentation for participation (e.g. degree certificates, valid visa, health insurance).

Application deadline: April 24, 2024

Application submission:

Please send your applications via email to Tino Trautmann, Centre for Human Rights Erlangen-Nürnberg: project-ffvtsummerschool@fau.de

You may also send your questions related to the FFVT Summer School to this email-address.

Participation fees:

To cover the expenses (including accommodation and meals), participants need to pay a personal contribution of 600 € for a double room, 555 € for a triple room and 525 € for a quadruple room. Participants need to cover the travel expenses themselves. Please indicate your preferred room type in your application. Due to the limited number of rooms, we cannot guarantee that your request will be considered.

Scholarships:

For up to 10 participants of the FFVT Summer School 2024, we offer scholarships that cover the participation fee – in case the corresponding participants and their institutions cannot fund their participation. In this case, please enclose a proof from your home institution clearly stating that it cannot cover the costs institutionally.

About FFVT:

FFVT aims to strengthen interdisciplinary research on forced migration and refugees in and beyond Germany. To this end, the project, which is funded by the German Federal Ministry of Education and Research (BMBF), brings together research on migration, development, conflict and violence, climate change, health, governance and human rights. In this way, FFVT supports the networking of researchers and institutes working in all relevant research fields dealing with forced migration.

Note on data protection:

The FFVT project is jointly run by the Bonn International Centre for Conversion (BICC), the Centre for Human Rights Erlangen-Nürnberg (FAU CHREN), the German Institute of Development and Sustainability (IDOS, Bonn) and the Institute for Migration Research and Intercultural Studies (IMIS, University of Osnabrück). The FFVT Summer School 2024 is furthermore co-organised by the KU Eichstätt-Ingolstadt. By submitting your application, you give your consent to the processing of your data by this consortium. Your data will only be used within the framework of the FFVT project for the purpose of reviewing the applications.
